

In 2008, we launched Targheeb.com as an archive and collection of Islamic research, news, articles, coursework resources and the like.

In 2009, we launched the Young Momins section attempting to share useful material that we have written and researched with links for parents and children who want to homeschool their children.

Since its launch, the Young Momins section has grown to become our main focus and we are working with other homeschoolers, educators and organizations to spread the word and build a community that caters for our future generation.

We remain committed to our goal of providing a completely free service to help individuals and organizations to benefit from our work.

Guidance is from Allah and we ask Him to continue to guide us in every step we take toward giving the best things of this world and the Hereafter to our children!
